SRR provides ongoing and continuous investment advisory services to its clients. SRR uses either a sub-advisor or third-party asset manager to provide its clients with portfolio management. Sub-advisor and third-party asset managers are unaffiliated registered investment advisors who specializes in portfolio management.

SRR is responsible for maintaining the client relationship and monitoring any changes in the client’s investment objectives, risk tolerance, investment goals and time horizon. SRR is responsible for providing its clients with a copy of the sub-advisor’s Part 2A of Form ADV. The third-party asset manager will provide clients with their ADV directly.

In the performance of services rendered on behalf of a client, SRR is not required to verify any information received from another professional, such as accountants or attorneys. Each client is advised that it remains their sole responsibility to promptly notify SRR when there is a change in their financial situation, goals or investment objectives which may prompt a review and an evaluation of a previous recommendation or course of action.

SRR may recommend the services of other professionals (for example: lawyers, accountants, insurance agents, real estate agents, mortgage brokers, etc.) at the request of the client. Those professionals are engaged directly by the client on an as-needed basis. Any conflicts of interest with any professional service providers are disclosed to the client.

Assets Under Management

As of December 31, 2023, SRR's assets under management was $8,661,129.

ITEM 5. FEES AND COMPENSATION

Financial Planning Fees

SRR does not charge a financial planning fee.

Investment Advisory Fees

SRR is a discretionary investment advisory. As such, it charges clients an advisory fee based on the amount of assets it manages for the client. SRR uses the advisory services of a sub-advisor to manage client assets. Sub-advisor's charge a fee based on the amount of assets under management for SRR clients. The sub-advisor's portfolio management fee is separate from and in addition to the portfolio management fees paid to SRR. SRR uses Financial & Tax Architects' Inc. as a sub-advisor. The chart below depicts SRR's advisory fee schedule.

Discretionary Management
	Advisory Fee*	Sub-Advisory Fee	Combined Fee
Assets Under Management	1.15%	.75%	1.90%

Fees may be negotiable under certain circumstances, including the length of client relationship, the number of family members associated with the client, among other factors.*

 The combined advisory fees of SRR and a sub-advisor shall not exceed 2.0% of assets under management. Lower advisory fees for comparable services may be available from other sources.*

Fees for both SRR and the sub-advisory are withdrawn by the custodian. Advisory fees are billed quarterly in arrears based on the account balance as of the close of business on the last business day of each quarter. Fees are reflected in client statements, as well as fee invoices provided by SRR. Accounts opened or closed within a given quarter are charged a pro-rata fee.

Third-Party Asset Management Fees

A third-party asset manager ("TPAM") is an investment advisor who provides discretionary advisory services to other advisors. SRR solicits clients for the TPAM. SRR is paid a portion of the advisory fee charged by the TPAM. The amount or percentage of the fee paid to SRR is disclosed in the TPAM's Solicitor Disclosure document. Additional details are disclosed in the TPAM's disclosure brochure which SRR is required to provide.

Termination of the Investment Advisory Agreement

The client may terminate the Investment Advisory Agreement (the "Advisory Agreement"), without penalty, by providing fifteen (15) days written notice. SRR may terminate the Advisory Agreement by providing the client with sixty (60) days written notice. Termination of the Advisory Agreement will not affect (a) the validity of any action previously taken by SRR under the Advisory Agreement; (b) liabilities or obligations of the parties from transactions initiated before termination of the Advisory Agreement; or

(c) the client's obligation to pay advisory fees (pro-rated through the date of termination). Upon termination, SRR shall have no obligation to recommend or take any action regarding the securities, cash, or other investments in any client account. To terminate an Advisory Agreement, the client must notify SRR, in writing, at: Sullivan Retirement Resources, LLC, 850 Franklin Street; Suite 12A, Wrentham, MA 02093.

Other Fees and Expenses

Clients may incur additional costs above and beyond the portfolio management fee. These costs include certain transaction costs imposed by the custodian and other parties, as well as fees from third party managers if such managers are utilized by SRR. Other costs include custodial fees, deferred sales charges, odd-lot differentials, transfer taxes, wire transfer and electronic fund fees.

Mutual funds, money market funds and exchange-traded funds (ETFs) also charge internal management fees, which are disclosed in the fund's prospectus. These fees may include a management fee, upfront sales charges, and other fund expenses.

SRR does not receive any compensation from these fees, which are in addition to the management fee you pay us. We encourage our clients to review all fees charged to their account to fully understand the total amount of fees you will pay. SRR believes the total cost of our services is competitive, and services like those services offered by SRR may be available for more or less than the amounts charged by us.

Custodians may charge transaction fees on purchases or sales of certain mutual funds and ETFs. These transaction charges are usually small and incidental to the purchase or sale of those securities. The selection of the security is more important than the nominal fee that the custodian charges to buy or sell it.

For additional information regarding SRR's brokerage practices, please see Item 12 on page 12.

Expense Ratios

Mutual funds generally charge a management fee for their services as the investment managers. This management fee is called an expense ratio. For example, an expense ratio of 0.50 means that the mutual fund company charges 0.50% for their services. These fees are in addition to the fees paid by you to SRR and the account custodian.

Performance figures quoted by mutual fund companies in various publications are after their fees have been deducted.

ITEM 6. PERFORMANCE-BASED FEES AND SIDE-BY-SIDE MANAGEMENT

SRR does not charge performance-based (fees calculated on a share of capital gains on or capital appreciation of the assets of the client) or side-by-side management fees. SRR does not charge fees based on the income, capital gains or capital appreciation.

ITEM 7. TYPES OF CLIENTS

Description

SRR provides portfolio management services to individuals, high net worth individuals, families and their related entities, and small businesses.

Account Minimums

SRR does not have a minimum account size requirement.

ITEM 8. METHODS OF ANALYSIS, INVESTMENT STRATEGIES AND RISK OF LOSS

In general, security analysis methods may include fundamental and other methods of analysis. Fundamental analysis focuses on the underlying factors that affect a company's actual business and its future prospects in determining estimated value. Investing in securities involves risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear. Past performance is not a guarantee of future returns.

There are specific risks associated with the different types of securities analysis. Fundamental analysis concentrates on factors which determine a company's value and expected future returns. This strategy focuses on purchasing stocks that are undervalued and are priced below their perceived expected value. The risk is that future returns are not achieved and thus the market value does not increase as expected or the market value fails to reach the expectations of the perceived value. Technical analysis attempts to predict future stock price direction based on market trends. The assumption is that the market follows discernible pricing patterns and if these pricing patterns are identified, then a prediction of future price may be made. The risk is that markets do not always follow past patterns and solely relying on the form of analysis cannot consider new and emerging patterns. Cyclical analysis assumes that markets react in cyclical patterns, once a cyclical pattern is identified, that knowledge may be used to predict performance of certain sectors or markets. There are two risk factors to consider here, first, markets do not always repeat past cycles; and second, if too many investors are able to identify the cyclical pattern and invest based on that predictive value of the cycle, then the cycle itself is changes and there is no predicted value to be exploited.

While we do not attempt to time the market, we may include cyclical analysis in conjunction with other strategies to help determine if shifts are required in your investment strategies. Cyclical analysis looks at such factors as short-term trends in financial markets and the performance of the overall national and global economy.

SRR utilizes a mosaic approach of available sources of news, financial data, financial newspapers and magazines, annual reports, prospectuses, corporate ratings services and filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission, as well as our own due diligence efforts.

The investment strategy for a specific client is based upon the objectives stated by the client during consultations. The client may change their investment objective at any time. The SRR Advisory Agreement includes a section where the investment objective and risk tolerance of the client are agreed to by both parties.

Security Specific Material Risks

All investment programs have certain risks that are borne by the investor. Our investment approach constantly keeps the risk of loss in mind. Investors face the following investments risks and should discuss and understand the following risks:

1. Interest-rate Risk: Fluctuations in interest rates may cause investment prices to fluctuate. For example, when interest rates rise, yields on existing bonds become less attractive, causing their market values to decline.

2. Market Risk: The price of a security, bond, or mutual fund may drop in reaction to tangible and intangible events and conditions. This type of risk is caused by external factors independent of a security's underlying circumstances. For example, political, economic, and social conditions may trigger market events.

3. Inflation Risk: When any type of inflation is present, a dollar today will buy more than a dollar next year, because purchasing power is eroding at the rate of inflation.

4. Currency Risk: Overseas investments are subject to fluctuations in the value of the dollar against the currency of the investment's originating country. This is also referred to as exchange rate risk.

5. Reinvestment Risk: This is the risk that future proceeds from investments may have to be reinvested at a potentially lower rate of return (i.e., interest rate). This primarily relates to fixed income securities.

6. Business Risk: These risks are associated with a particular industry or a particular company within an industry. For example, oil-drilling companies depend on finding oil and then refining it, a lengthy process, before they can generate profit. They carry a higher risk of profitability than an electric company which generates its income from a steady stream of customers who buy electricity no matter what the economic environment is like.

7. Liquidity Risk: Liquidity is the ability to readily convert an investment into cash. Generally, assets are more liquid if many traders are interested in a standardized product. For example, Treasury Bills are highly liquid, while real estate properties are not.

8. Financial Risk: Excessive borrowing to finance a business' operations increases the risk of profitability, because the company must meet the terms of its obligations in good times and bad. During periods of financial stress, the inability to meet loan obligations may result in bankruptcy and/or a declining market value.

9. Principal Risk: The possibility that an investment will go down in value, or "lose money", from the original or invested amount.

10. Specific Security Risks: When invested with a sub-advisory, client assets may be primarily or wholly invested in Exchange Traded Funds ("ETF's"). Exchange Traded Funds prices may vary significantly from the Net Asset Value throughout the day due to market conditions and changes in the price of the underlying holdings. Certain Exchange Traded Funds may not track underlying benchmarks as expected. ETFs are also subject to the following risks: (i) an ETF's shares may trade at a market price that is above or below their net asset value; (ii) trading of an ETF's shares may be halted if the listing exchange's officials deem such action appropriate, the shares are de-listed from the exchange, or the activation of market-wide "circuit breakers" (which are tied to large decreases in stock prices) halts stock trading generally. (iii) Certain ETFs may employ leverage, which creates additional volatility and price risk depending on the amount of leverage utilized, the collateral, and the liquidity of the supporting collateral. Further, the use of leverage (i.e., employing the use of margin) generally results in additional interest costs to the ETF. Volatility and liquidity can severely and negatively impact the price of the ETF's underlying portfolio securities, thereby causing significant price fluctuations of the ETF. There is also a risk that authorized participant(s) will decide to no longer participate in providing liquidity to an ETF. The Adviser has no control over the risks taken by the underlying funds in which clients invest. While ETFs may provide diversification, risks can be significantly increased for funds concentrated in a particular sector of the market, or that primarily invest in small cap or speculative companies, use leverage (i.e., borrow money), or concentrate in a particular type of security rather than balancing the fund with different types of securities. ETFs can be bought and sold throughout the day and their price can fluctuate throughout the day. During times of heightened market volatility, the price of an ETF can be lower than that of the actual underlying securities. ETF managers trade fund investments in accordance with fund investment objectives and a particular investment strategy, and the ETF may be limited by its investment strategy. In addition to the internal cost of the ETF that is usually paid by the investor, many ETFs are also subject to trading costs from the custodian when you purchase and/or sell the ETF from your account.

Other Industry Affiliations

Dan Sullivan, in his individual capacity, is a licensed insurance agent. Mr. Sullivan may, from time to time, recommend certain insurance and/or annuity products on a commission basis to SRR clients. Mr. Sullivan spends approximately 50% of his time on this activity. Any sales commissions generated by the sale of insurance products by Mr. Sullivan are paid to SRR Financial and are separate and distinct from the investment advisory fees outlined in Item 5 of this Brochure. Any recommendation by Mr. Sullivan for the sale of these products to SRR clients creates a conflict of interest. There is a financial incentive for Mr. Sullivan to recommend their purchase to SRR clients. However, Mr. Sullivan attempts to mitigate any conflicts of interest to the best of his ability by placing the interests of his clients ahead of his own interests and through the implementation of certain policies and procedures that directly address such conflicts. SRR clients are not obligated to purchase any insurance or annuity products recommended by Mr. Sullivan. Clients are always free to purchase the same, or substantially similar, products from another insurance agent or agency. Each SRR client is made aware that the products recommended by Mr. Sullivan in his capacity as an insurance agent may be available from other sources and may be available at a lower cost.

Mr. Sullivan is not an affiliate of or an employee of any sub-advisor or third-party asset manager SRR recommends to its clients.
